

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A printing apparatus capable of easily and reliably preventing execution of an unnecessary print job due to a user's misoperation or the like. According to the printing apparatus, when the same print job is successively transmitted from an external device such as a personal computer in a short time, it is determined that the transmitted print job is a print job requiring confirmation as to whether to execute or not, and information for the confirmation is transmitted to the external device.